6th Annual General Meeting 6th Sept 2020

Resolution: Threats from China and Aatmanirbhar Bharat

Annexure-A

Pandemic and Chinese conflict have created an opportunities to make India self-reliant. There were intensive and extensive relations between India and China. It was based on civilisation understanding and Asian values. The Wuhan and Mahaballipuram meetings displayed this bonding. Unfortunately China understood Indian friendship as a compulsion and created conflicting conditions in Eastern Ladhakh. Gradually situations turned ugly. India decided to act decisively. Many Chinese products and apps were banned. But banning Chinese products were challenge for India. Indian Prime Minister took this challenge as an opportunity. The Prime Minister has said time again it is high time to shift from importer of goods to exporter. India has all the avenues and resources to do so. A strong, confident and “Aatmanirbhar”(self-reliant) Bharat is essential not just for itself, but for the sake of larger global good, Prime Minister NarendraModi said. The PM outlined the contours of this new self-reliant India across all spheres — education, health, agriculture, manufacturing, infrastructure, trade, defence, foreign policy, environment, digital connectivity; for all segments of society — the poor, the middle class, women, young, entrepreneurs, labour; and in all regions — from Kashmir to the North-east, from urban to rural areas. “How long will we keep selling raw materials and buying finished products? How long will this game continue?” he asked. It was time to reduce imports, enhance India’s own products, go vocal for local, innovate, and not just “make in India” but “make for the world”, the PM said.

But undertaking this huge challenge we need to change the mindset of the people of India. Earlier regimes have branded western products from garments to knowledge. It had clipped the indigenous talents and ideas. Now things must change. The New National Education Policy as a framework that would make Indian students both rooted in their own setting as well as equipped to become global citizens. It will help set the ball rolling.

First steps to prepare for Mission Aatmanirbhar Bharat– One, laws, rules, and procedures are to be further modified and tweaked to drastically reduce the number of approvals and number of taxations. Two, the layers of approvals is required to go. One nodal dept with one senior official has to own a particular type of applicants and ensure all approvals and compliances from all respective depts. The mission, however, would need lot of initiation, monitoring and command. The entire machinery including that of states would have to have the unison efforts with a passionate commitment to the cause. Every citizen has to realise this challenge and help the government create new opportunities. It would prove a game changer. The largest young populace of the world could convert India to a leading global power house of manufacturer.

Therefore, we the people of Bharat solemnly uphold to create a self-reliant Bharat which will change the landscape of development in coming years. We also resolve to connect the people in making it hugely successful exercise in rescinding foreign goods and adopting the concept from local to global.
